CONSTABLE PECK MURDERED

Sprague the Scane of a Cowardly Crime Tuesday.

A. S. JONES SHOOTS AN UNARMED MAN

Stands the Crowd Off with His Revolver and Escapes to the Woods Accompanied by His Wife and Children.

SPRAGUE, Neb., Feb. 21.-(Special Telegram to The Bee.)-The details of the shooting of J. A. Peck here yesterday by A. S. Jones are as follows: Mr. Jones has been an agent for the Missouri Pacific railway for some four years and was agent the greater part of his time at this place. Some three or four months ago he was transferred to Walton, Neb., but after going to the latter place the bond company refused to accept his application for bond, thus letting him out of a position and he was relieved February 15, and on the 20th started for home via Lincoln and the Rock Island. When he got aboard the cars at Lincoln he found that Peck of this place was also a passenger. Going to Peck he accused him of giving the bond company damaging reports regarding his character and telling eck that as he was dealing in liquor withit license at Sprague, he (Jones) intended to see that he would have some trouble as well as himself.

After getting off the train at the Rock After getting off the train at the Rock Island station, one mile west of here, they continued their quarrel and Pock slapped Jones in the face. Parties present inter-fered and got the men apart and they agreed to make up their troubles and started for home, but had not too the decretion. for home, but had not left the depot platform when Jones pulled his gun and opened fire on Peck, shooting him four times, killing him instantly. He then held up his gun and said he had one left for the man who attempted to stop him, and commenced running towards town. When he arrived at his residence he took his family and went to the section house and told the section foreman that he had killed a man and wanted him to protect him, saying he would kill the first man who came for him. The victim was the constable here, and i left the town without any one who thought was his duty to take the murderer.

Through this fact and Jones' threat he was allowed to escape. Immediately after the shooting the coroner and sheriff of Lancaster county were notified. The sheriff came at once and had the body brought to town to await the coming of the coroner, who arrived this morning and empaneled a jury, and after examining the evidence rendered a verdict to the effect that J. A. Peck came to his death by wounds caused by a gun in the hands of A. S. Jones and with malicious intent. The officers are doing everything possible to effect his capture, but up to 9 o'clock tonight have found no trace of him.

The funeral will be held at the residence tomorrow at 1 o'clock. Mr. Peck leaves a wife and four small children. He was will have charge of the ceremonies tomor

STOCK RAISING DISCUSSED.

Many Nebraska People Interested in the Subject Entertained at Columbus. COLUMBUS, Neb., Feb. 21 .- (Special Tele cram to The Bee.)-The sessions today of the State Improved Stock Breeders association were largely attended and developed more than usual interest. The address of S. A. Barker on the "Sheep Industry" was very timely and elicited considerable applause when the effects of the Wilson bill were touched upon. Two facts stated challenged attention-that 80,000 sheep nonth more than ever before are now being slaughtered at Chicago and that wool has sold as low as 3 cents a pound.

The paper of Prof. Ingersoll on "Heredity was listened to with marked attention and brought out quite a bit of discussion. THREATENED FOR CONTEMPT. Kearney Investment Company Officials May

Be Sent to Jall. LINCOLN, Feb. 21.- (Special to The Bec. -The officers of the Mutual Loan and Investment company of Kearney and E. E. St. John of that city are making strenuous efforts to induce the supreme court not to carry out its intimation that they should be sent to jail for contempt of court. The company is indebted to the defunct Commercial and Savings bank of Kearney to the extent of $31,188.47. On June 6 the supreme court ordered the officers of the investment company to turn over to the receiver securlties to the value of their indebtedness. The order was not complied with and on July 8 the court ordered the company, by its officers, to appear and show cause why it should not be punished for contempt of court. KEARSARGE CREWSAFE HOME

Last Days of the Gallant Old Vessel as Told by Her Officers.

ADMIRAL STANTON TELLS THEIR STORY

He is Interviewed at Great Length on the Wreck of the Old War Ship and the Subsequent Sufferings of

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The steamer City of Para, having on board the officers and erew of the famous old war susp Kearsarge, which now lies on a coral shoal called Roncader reef, where she struck on February 2. arrived off quarantine today from Colon. As the City of Para reached quarantine the crew of the Kearsarga could be seen on her deck, She was boarded by Dr. Jenkins, the health officer, who, with a representative of the As-sociated press, was the first to extend con-gratulations to the officers of the Kearsarge. The voyage from Colon was a pleasant one or winter, and the City of Para made an excellent passage.

The City of Para arrived at the Pacific Mail dock shortly after noon. The dock was gaily decorated with flags and over the gang plank was spread a huge American flag in honor of the Kearsarge crew. A large crowd of the friends and relatives of the men was on the pier to greet them, while a still larger crowd surged in the street, all craning their necks for a view of the sailors. necks for a view of the sailors.
The Associated press reporter who boarded the City of Para at Quarantine, talked with some of the officers and crew of the Kear-sarge, who related the story of the wrock of the famous old man-of-war on Roncador reef. Acting Admiral Oscar F. Stanton, who was first seen by the Associated press reporter, gave the following account of the wreck of his flagship.

"The accident occurred about 2 o'clock in the afternon of February 2. A stiff north-cast fresh wind was blowing, and there was a considerable surf. The Kearsarge struck rather lightly at first, and there was a heavy jar and crash when the ship went up high and dry on the reef. and dry on the reef. "We remained on board the Kearsarge that night and were taken ashore the next day. The City of Para did not come until Saturday, February 10, about a week from the time we went on shore on Roncador Island. All hands were taken off the Kearsarge on the catamaran heat, after working all night in order to get things ready for our departure from our ship. After we reached the shore, we gathered together some old sails, awnings and duck, with which we rigged up a tent to shelter us. The weather was quite warm though, to make such a tent sufficiently comfortable. To increase the small supply of water we were enabled to carry with us from the Kearsarge, we dug a well. We also had what provisions we could save from the ship. We built rafts during the night and early Saturday morning, in order to transport what things we could take away from the ship, together with eight days' supply of water, which permitted a supply of one pint a day for each man. There was no excitement, no panie, but everybody was cool-headed, and the officers and crew all united in an effort to make the best of the situation. "Licutenant Brainard went to Colon as Kearsarge in order to communicate with the Navy department at Washington and charter a steamer to come to our aid. "Everyone aboard the Kearsarge, both officers and men, are with me, except Mr. Brainard, who was detached to the const survey steamer Ranger at Acajutla. There are twenty-one officers and 181 men, making up 202 in all, and we are all well. The Kearsarge carried eight boats, three of these on the port side were stove, and one of them was washed away. ONE MAN WAS DROWNED.

"Anderson Robbins, one of the men, was drowned shortly after the wreck. The ship was rapidly filling with water and Robbins was swimming for the reef, but he could not and was drowned. This occurred the day we landed. "In going ashore we were compelled to go n parties of six, the capacity of the catamaran boat, which was held fast by a life line which was stretched from the Kearsarge to the shore. When we discovered Fireman Anderson Robbins struggling in the water we dispatched a licitement and seven men in a life boat to his assistance, and made every effort to save him, but he sank beore we could reach him. "After we had gotten safely ashore, Lieutenant Brainard and seven men were dis-patched to Old Providence in a life boat in order to secure assistance. The City of Para, which was chartered, did not reach us until 10 o'clock. She immediately launched two boats, which, assisted by the Kearsargo's four life boats, took all the hands on board the City of Para as quickly as possible and the latter sailed for Colon, stopping at Old Providence to pick up the lieutenant and crew who had been sent Commander Heyerman to give us assist-the Associated press representative as to the cause of the accident, whether due as rumored to defective chronometers or otherwise, Admiral Stanton said: "I can say nothing in regard to the matter of responsibility of the wreck of the Kearsarge and therefore cannot express any opinion as to whether the wreck of the ship was due to carelessness or defective instruments or to any one on board the Kearsarge. I presume there will be a court of inquiry to investi-gate into all this, when these facts will be fully developed. The whole thing will come out it, due course of time, but what the pature of the court of inquiry will be when convened I cannot say."

"Anyhow," continued Admiral Stanton, "I feel inclined to tay as little as possible about this matter because of the peculiar misfortune which has seemed to follow me of late. I had sufficient notoristy already, this being the second time I have arrived in New York harbor under almost sensational cir-curestances within a abort time. I am feeling very happy and my physical condi-tion, and I might say mental condition, is just a trifle better than it was on the last occasion of my trip north.

Admiral Stanton, as well as all the officers and erew of the Kearsarge, were their naval uniforms. Some of them were evercosts, a few caps, while a good number were not so fortunate as to have the fermer. "I rejuice greatly in the possession of this overcoat I am weating," said Admiral Stanton, "and I really do not know exactly where I got hold of it. It has felt very comfortable since we got up north and into the cold weather. The clothing I have on will be about all there is left of my ward-robe as it was impossible to say you would robe, as it was impossible to mave very much after the wreck occurred."

In answer to a question as to the possibility of recovering and saying the Kear-sarge, Admiral Stanton said: "There is no possible chance of saving her. She was stove in when she struck the rest, and wh we left her she was almost full of water Even if this were not the case, the weather is such down there that it is very difficult to work on account of the intense heat and blistering sun."

COMMANDER HEYERMAN'S STORY.

Commander Oscar F. Heyerman was next seen by the Associated press reporter. He said: "I have nothing to say that will add said: "I have nothing to say that will add to what Admiral Stanton has told you of our experiences during the recent wreck of the vessel. He and I were together from the moment she struck until she went sahore the next day, as he insisted on remaining with me every moment. He and I were the last persons to leave the Kearsarge. We went ashore to save our lives, as the Kearsarge was hearing to sain a great deal of water. We made saveral attempts to go ashore, but were unsuccessful, until we finally succeeded in getting ashore on the catamaran hoat. We took four or five days' provisions with us, consisting of water, bread hard-tack and canned meats. We got along very well after we reached the shore, although our supply of provisions was short, and until we dug a well our water was very source. As to the responsiwater was very scarce. As to the responsi-bility for the accident, I do not care to say anything. Those facts will be investigated,
